A POTOMAC

The 14,670 square miles of the Potomac basin comprise the second largest drainage within the overall Chesapeake Bay watershed and the only one containing portions of four states – Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania – and the District of Columbia. Perhaps nowhere else in the Bay watershed is the opportunity for sharing across jurisdictional lines so crucial to the success of the revised tributary strategies.

SPONSOR:

- Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin (ICPRB)

COSPONSORS

- Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
- Commonwealth of Virginia
- District of Columbia
- EPA Chesapeake Bay Program Office
- Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments
- Northern Virginia Regional Commission
- State of Maryland
- State of West Virginia
- University of Maryland
- West Virginia University

Shared Potomac Strategy Conference

“Meeting Our Water Quality Goals”

November 20, 2002

CONFERENCE GOALS

- Increase awareness among the stakeholders of water quality issues within the watershed and the inter-relationship of local and Bay-wide actions and impacts.
- Increase awareness of the actions that different stakeholders are taking to meet Bay Program goals.
- Develop ideas for common elements among the jurisdictions' individual tributary strategies.
- Forge stakeholder alliances within sub-basins of the watershed to work together on developing and implementing common elements of the tributary strategies.

WHO WILL ATTEND?

Participation will be by invitation. Partner jurisdictions will identify and invite selected stakeholders from among local governments and regional government associations; environmental and watershed-based groups; other non-governmental organizations; and business interests, including farm organizations and chambers of commerce. The total will be 150-175 stakeholders from across the Potomac River basin.
